

The Coop Scoop

TIP:
Always provide a clean, dry dust bath. Keep a cover on your dust bath to keep it dry.

Some backyard fowl, like chickens and quail, don't use a traditional water bath. Instead they will crouch in a dust bath and roll and dig until they are completely covered in it. A dust bath is an important and enjoyable activity that should be offered to your birds as part of their daily preening routine. If you haven't offered a dust bath to your birds you may have noticed them digging in your cherished gardens or tossing around in dry, loose dirt near their coop. Baby chicks should have a shallow tray of Fresh Coop™ Dust Bath provided for them in their enclosure or brooder. Older birds may find this grooming behavior odd if they have never had a dust bath introduced to them. Give them time and before you know it they will be flopping and clucking around enjoying their bath time. Your flock will either make this a group event or they will patiently wait in line until their turn.

Food-Grade Diatomaceous Earth

From the makers of DIATOMACEOUS RED LAKE earth®

All-in-One Coop Care Kit

Fresh Coop™ Introduces

