

PHOENIX – GOLD, SILVER, WHITE

The Phoenix chicken is an alert breed with a pheasant-like appearance. They are fair layers and do go broody. The chicks are hardy, but require extra protein when their tails are growing. The breed is well-suited to properties where it can roam at large, thriving best when given a good deal of freedom. This breed was developed from Japanese long tail breeds and as a result has extraordinary wide, rigid sickle feathers of two to five feet in length and saddle feather of 12 to 18 inches! Their feathers are excellent for decorative uses.

Main use – O

Egg Production – L

Size and color – S-M/White

Best kept free range; heat tolerant.

Classified as Threatened by the ALBC.